MUSIC DISTRIBUTION SYSTEM, MUSIC DISTRIBUTION METHOD, RECORDING MEDIUM, AND PROGRAM

PUB. NO.: 2002-215176 [JP 2002215176 A]
 PUBLISHED: July 31, 2002 (20020731)
 INVENTOR(s): SUZUKI HIDEO
 APPLICANT(s): CASIO COMPUT CO LTD
 APPL. NO.: 2001-013558 [JP 200113558]

ABSTRACT

PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED: To provide a music distribution system which automatically distributes music contents for an effective sales promotion for stores, and to provide a music distribution method, a recording medium, and a program.

SOLUTION: A music distribution system (server) 2 manages a plurality of sales promotion programs for various kinds of music which provide sales promotion for stores according to various kinds of store situations. Store situations such as clientele situations are collected from a store terminal 3A, a POS terminal 3B, or a in-store camera 3C provided in a store. A sales promotion program corresponding to the collected store situations is specified, and music contents contained in a music category set in the specified sales promotion program is acquired. The streaming distribution of the music contents is performed so that each of the music contents are played back in the store 3 according to a playback schedule set in the sales promotion program.

Alerting Abstract WO A2

NOVELTY - Each time a page is selected for viewing, a server includes a graphic that will be located in the banner advertisement region and the graphic is selected according to the campaign rules, which define what products are covered, if any discounts will be offered and to whom, to whom the advertisements will be displayed and the time period for the campaign. The effectiveness is judged according to evaluation of occurring events.

USE - Tracking effectiveness of advertising over the Internet system.

ADVANTAGE - Easy to use method compatible with current systems.

This dissertation examines the influence of different kinds of customization of advertisements that are presented to consumers in the context of Web Pages in a naturalistic setting. It is proposed that customized messages will motivate and/or facilitate greater elaboration of product information, resulting in more extreme attitudes. Additionally, elaboration results in stronger attitudes (attitudes that serve as better guides to behavior; see Petty, Haugtvedt, & Smith, 1995).

Two customization techniques are employed. In Study 1, the importance of specific product attributes (information obtained from the consumer via the web page) is used to rearrange and differentially highlight features of a product. In Study 2, matching the tone of message to personal characteristics of the consumer is examined.

Each study measures reactions to customized and non-customized versions of the advertisements by randomly assigned groups of consumers. This design allows inferences to be made about the degree of attitude and purchase enhancement (or decrement) attributed to customization. The studies provide support for the hypotheses and have important implications for the design and implementation of marketing communication strategies that include a WWW component.

TEXT:

A phenomenon that presents potentially major problems for the brand in developed markets is the fact that many consumers are becoming disenfranchised from the marketing effort. The consumer has become more marketing literate and, in not-so-extreme cases, cynical about marketing and advertising. They are frequently able to deconstruct brand...

...playing an increasing role. Downshifting has become popular as consumers look for alternatives to the accelerating pace of a high-pressure life. 'Excessive' marketing may act as one trigger for this behaviour. Furthermore, consumers have been taught that they have a voice. Research by Ventura in 1998 showed that the British complained more than other Europeans, 25--34 year...

...shoddy products. We believe that customer service will become the new marketing battleground for the next decade. A 1998 survey commissioned by the UK magazine Campaign showed that 52% of consumers switch channels during the commercial break. One of the major issues facing marketers today is the increase in the number...

...than it was in the past. More choice means a smaller audience for each opportunity. Add to this the possibility of changing TV channels during advertisement breaks or fast-forwarding video cassettes during playback and it becomes increasingly difficult to reach the viewer. Towards the end of 1998, the UK magazine SuperMarketing reported a degree...

...services companies. Communications media should be used selectively. While we would advocate using a full range of communications options, this does not mean a scattergun approach. Instead, companies should evaluate different media channels so that the role of an individual channel can be defined and its effectiveness closely monitored. The style of the message should be...

 The Denver Post
 Denver Post, MON1 ED, P E-02

Chiat/Day has been presenting commercials for Energizer batteries that begin as if they were commercials for other products, and a campaign the agency created for TV Guide offered mock segments from dull television programs like "Polka Time."

Certainly not every commercial can be created without influences. Other spots shown during Super Bowl...

PRIVACY ADVOCATES' NEXT BATTLE: INTERACTIVE TV

... ultimate interactive marketing tool. But privacy advocates contend it will be more like Big Brother. Aurora will test new software that will allow advertisers to send a Pampers commercial into a home with children, while at the same time, the bachelor in a condo down the road gets an ad for the new Audi...

... overblown. Indeed, AT&T Broadband's experiment in Aurora, which begins this fall, is designed first and foremost to see if the basic technology that sends different commercials into different homes will actually work outside of the laboratory. As for data collection, they point out that the 1984 Cable Act prevents them from sharing customers' "personally identifiable" information with anyone. AT&T, in fact, is buying general information about people and their neighborhoods from third-party marketing companies - the kind used in direct-mail campaigns ....

... individual consumers," says the report. Chester and his staff spent months collecting industry documents and going to trade shows to monitor the development and the direction of this nascent technology. They found such things as software for cable set-top boxes that will register whether you click off in the middle...

... 1984 Cable Act does not prevent TV satellite companies or phone companies from sharing information. It calls on Congress to begin setting out clear privacy guidelines before the technology spreads. By 2006, as many as 50 million US homes could have interactive TV. But the industry again says such concerns are exaggerated. The world's leading interactive technology and TV companies have formed an industry-wide group to monitor privacy issues and recommend guidelines for self-regulation. "(They are) trying to be very clear about what kind of information...

...3.4 million e- mail subscribers to immediately access an advertiser's pre-loaded home page on the Web. The interactive advertisements on Juno take ~~several forms~~, including banner ads that appear at the top of the screen while a member reads and writes e-mail, and "pop-up" ~~ads~~ that appear at the ~~start~~ of a member's session. Web clickthrough can be enabled for both types of ads, at each advertiser's discretion. "E-mail is the push...

...to the needs of advertisers by giving them a more powerful set of tools than they have ever had before." Cherins said Juno logs all ~~ad~~ impressions ~~displayed~~ to its members, and provides regular ~~campaign~~ reports detailing precisely how many people were shown an ad, how many clicked on it to display further information, how many chose to respond, and...

...down along relevant demographic lines. "All impressions displayed over Juno are guaranteed," Cherins said, with advertisers being charged only for the number of times their ~~ads~~ are actually ~~displayed~~ to Juno members. Cherins said that advertisers on Juno include American Airlines, American Express, Bausch & Lomb, BMW, Bristol-Myers Squibb, Celebrity Cruises, Chase Manhattan Bank...
